LAWYERS

To whom it may concern,

I write this letter to offer my unreserved support for Professor Denny Indrayana to be a principal lawyer in the state of Victoria, Australia.

I came to know Professor Indrayana closely when he served as my Special Advisor for Legal Affairs (2008), then extended to cover Legal Affairs, Human Rights, and Anticorruption (2008–2011), and as Deputy Minister of Law and Human Rights (2011–2014). All during my terms as the Sixth President of the Republic of Indonesia between 2004 to 2014.

Professor Indrayana is a man of considerable force and intelligence, backed by high integrity and resourcefulness. During his service as my Special Advisor, he provided me legal opinions and reviewed legislations, which he came not only from domestic legal area, but also comparative analysis. He would bring overseas' perspective in his works, including the United States of America and Australia, two common law system countries which he completed postgraduate studies.

In my experiences, he stands out as a meticulous and versatile legal practitioner who has committed himself to reform of our country's criminal justice and human rights system, sometimes even to the extent of risking his own safety by confronting those who resisted our reforms for their own corrupt reasons. I also recognise his deep commitment to constitutional law and anticorruption campaigns, factors that driven me to appoint him to my special staff in the first place.

As Deputy Minister of Law and Human Rights, Professor Indrayana has worked and endlessly helped me to push legal and bureaucratic reform. In the position, he supervised the Indonesian Central Authority which was responsible to establish international partnerships, including Mutual Legal Assistance with Australia. He worked closely and effectively with my office in a number of major legal matters to recover criminally obtained assets overseas. He also played a key role in handling important international arbitration cases involving our government.

It is my view that Professor Indrayana's long experience as a senior public official and a lawyer in Indonesia would be an asset to legal practice wherever he is, especially in Australia, considering his long and strong relation with the country. Therefore, it is with the utmost pleasure that I endorse him with my highest recommendation to practise law in Australia.
